Israelis Get First Taste of Baseball

PLAY BALL: Israelis watch the opening game of the Israel Baseball League between the Modiin Miracles and the Petah Tikva Pioneers in Petah Tikva on Sunday afternoon. There were no peanuts or Cracker Jack — two staples of America's pastime — but 3,000 fans cheered as the Miracles defeated the Pioneers 9-1 in the country's first professional baseball game.

'Chemical Ali' Set for Execution

Saddam's cousin ordered to hang for slaughter of Kurds

BAGHDAD | Saddam Hussein's cousin, known as "Chemical Ali," and two other regime officials were sentenced Sunday to hang for slaughtering up to 180,000 Kurdish men, women and children with chemical weapons, artillery barrages and mass executions two decades ago.

Two other defendants were sentenced to life in prison for their roles in the 1987-1988 crackdown known as "Operation Anfal." A sixth defendant was acquitted for lack of evidence. Death sentences are automatically appealed.

The most notorious defendant was Saddam's cousin Ali Hassan al-Majid, who gained his nickname for ordering the use of mustard gas and nerve agents against the Kurds in response to their collaboration with the Iranians during the 1980-1988 Iran-Iraq War.

Witnesses testified that Iraqi forces indiscriminately attacked women and children, burned crops, killed livestock and rounded up civilians into detention camps in a campaign to exterminate the Kurdish minority.

Al-Majid trembled in silence as Judge Mohammed Oreibi al-Khalifa read the verdict against him and imposed five death sentences for genocide, war crimes and crimes against humanity. SINAN SALAHEDDIN (AP)

SKY TERROR

Let Loose the Cats of War!

Beijing's airport is declaring war on pigeons. Flocks of the birds are thronging the airport, crashing into planes and threatening public safety, the state-run China Daily newspaper said Saturday. Some are carrier pigeons raised as pets, a centuries-old Beijing tradition. "Pigeons are now one of the greatest threats for airplanes," said Huang Jianjun, an airport manager. "It is with urgency that local authorities ban pigeon breeding, feeding and flying anywhere near the airport." The airport has strung nets and tried to scare away pigeons with loudspeakers that broadcast sounds of owls and other predators but has had little success. (AP)

Does Nationwide Cover Plane vs. Car?

An Oregon man has sued over a traffic accident that involved an unlikely pair of vehicles — his Lamborghini and a small plane piloted by FBI agents. The propeller from the Cessna mangled the driver's side of the car. According to federal court filings, the accident happened on a road that goes through the Aurora Airport. Marlowe Treit, a licensed pilot who lives in Aurora, Ore., and owns a business at the airport, claims he had the right-of-way and that the pilot should have seen him. NTSB investigators said both parties failed "to maintain an adequate visual lookout," which contributed to the wreck. (AP)

PUPPY LOVE

'Do Not Mock Me'

Elwood, a 2-year-old Chinese Crested and Chihuahua mix, was crowned the world's ugliest dog Friday in a contest at a California fair. Elwood, dark colored and hairless — save for a mohawk-like puff of white fur on his head — is often referred to as "Yoda" or "ET" for his resemblance to those science-fiction characters. "The breeder was going to euthanize him because she thought he was too ugly to sell," said owner Karen Quigley. "So, ha, ha — now Elwood's all over the Internet, and people love him and adore him." SPORTS

No Ump Jokes, Please

Fans were muted when blind baseball players turned out Saturday for a round-robin tournament on Long Island. The crowd kept quiet because noise would prevent the players from hearing the beeping baseball or running toward the buzzing bases. In the game, the batter listens for the pitch and takes his cuts; the bases are soft pylons at first and third. The hitter has the option of running to either base. If the batter reaches the base before a fielder can grab a hit ball, a run is scored. (AP)

Special Report solves the "My home isn't selling" problem

WASHINGTON METRO – A "Special Report" explodes what its author exposes as "The myth of slow home sales." In fact, the Report explains, in clear and plain English, how a home owner who wants to sell can not only count on a sale within 120 days but can be guaranteed that the sale will occur.

The Report proves its accuracy by quoting specific local instances in which the technique it describes has sold homes time after time, quickly, efficiently, and at a favorable price.

The author of the report, noted realtor Frank Sanya, has made numerous appearances on both television and radio.

Mr. Sanya states that the Report represents the compendium of his many years of real estate experience and can be of substantial value to homeowners, especially those whose homes have been on the market unsold for a considerable period of time. The author emphasizes that although he does not accept every listing, by following the Report's procedures he accomplishes a sale in every instance in which he is the broker of record.

The secret, says the Report, is a combination of traits and procedures that consistently result in a successful sale. For a free copy of the Report, go to a private but available Web site — www.WantItSoldNow.com.

A fire damaged part of the state Casino Control Commission headquarters Sunday, but gaming in Atlantic City should not be affected, a spokesman for the commission said. The average price of gasoline across the country dropped about 11 cents over the last two weeks, according to a national survey released Sunday. Study: Staph Superbug Is Prevalent

Researchers suggest drug-resistant germ is common in hospitals

ATLANTA | A dangerous, drug-resistant staph germ may be infecting as many as 5 percent of hospital and nursing home patients, according to a comprehensive study.

At least 30,000 U.S. hospital patients may have the superbug at any given time, according to a survey released Monday by the Association for Professionals in Infection

CLEAN BILL OF HEALTH

→ Health care workers can prevent the spread of the staph germ through regular hand-washing and equipment decontamination, by wearing gloves and gowns and by separating infected people from other hospital patients.

→ The researchers in the staph study concluded that at least 46 out of every 1,000 hospital patients had the bug.

Control and Epidemiology.

The estimate is about 10 times the rate that some health officials had previously estimated.

Some federal health officials said they had not seen the study and could not comment on its methodology or its prevalence. But they welcomed added attention to the problem.

"This is a welcome piece of information that emphasizes that this is a huge problem in health care facilities, and more needs to be done to prevent it," said Dr. John Jernigan, an epidemiologist with the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

At issue is a superbug known as Methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus, which cannot be tamed by certain common antibiotics. It is associated with sometimes-horrific skin infections, but it also causes blood infections, pneumonia and other illnesses.

The potentially fatal germ, which is spread by touch, typically thrives in health care settings where people have open wounds. MIKE STOBBE (AP)

New Arrest Made in Woman's Death

Body found in park is pregnant woman who had been missing

CANTON, OHIO | A former classmate of the man suspected of killing a pregnant woman was arrested Sunday on an obstruction-of-justice charge, the FBI said.

Myisha Ferrell was arrested in the death of 26-year-old Jessie Davis after sheriff's deputies and FBI agents broke down the door of her apartment Saturday night, agent Scott Wilson said.

The Stark County Sheriff's Department refused to discuss the arrest, saying any information made public would hurt their case.

The Summit County medical examiner on Sunday identified a

Edwards' Wife Has Own View On Gay Marriage

SAN FRANCISCO | Elizabeth Edwards, the wife of Democratic presidential hopeful John

Edwards, kicked off San Francisco's annual gay pride parade Sunday by splitting with her husband over gay marriage. "I don't know why someone else's marriage has anything to do with me," Edwards said. "I'm completely comfortable with gay marriage."

She conceded her support puts her at odds with her husband, who she said supports civil unions but not same-sex marriages. (AP)

Senators Debate Cheney's Position

Vice president says his office is exempt from disclosure requirement

WASHINGTON | Democratic senators on Sunday chided Vice President Dick Cheney for declaring his office exempt from sections of a presidential order involving matters of national security. Republicans, more cautiously, said the matter deserves review.

At issue is a requirement that executive branch offices provide data about how much material they classify and declassify. That information is to be provided to the Information Security Oversight Office at the National Archives.

The White House contends that Cheney is complying properly. They say the presidential order was not intended to treat the vice president's office as an executive branch "agency," and, therefore,

Cheney's office is exempt from the reporting requirement.

"The vice president is saying he's above the law, and the fact of the matter is, legal scholars are going to say this is preposterous," said Sen. Ron Wyden, D-Ore.

Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., called Cheney's move "the height of arrogance."

Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss., countered that conflicts between the White House and Congress over jurisdictional bounds are not unusual. "Let the courts decide if there's something wrong here," he said. (AP)

Lady Bird Johnson Still in Hospital

AUSTIN, TEXAS | Lady Bird Johnson spent another day in the hospital Sunday with no major change in her condition, three days after the former first lady was admitted with a slight fever, a family spokeswoman said.

Johnson, 94, spent the weekend at Seton Medical Center surrounded by family members, including daughters Luci Baines Johnson and Lynda Johnson Robb. She was admitted Thursday night.

Her husband, former President Lyndon B. Johnson, died in 1973. Lady Bird Johnson has remained active publicly in the years since while living in Austin and spending time at the family's ranch. (AP)

Immigration Bill Faces Tough Road

Support for legislation uncertain as senators continue negotiations

WASHINGTON | Senators pushing a new immigration policy appealed Sunday to wavering supporters ahead of renewed debate on securing the borders and dealing with 12 million undocumented immigrants.

A fragile compromise was pulled from the Senate in early June, then resurrected after bipartisan negotiations with the White House.

"We'll see if, between the two parties, we have 60 votes" needed to keep the bill moving toward a final vote, said Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif.

President Bush long has advocated an immigration overhaul. On Saturday, he urged lawmakers to "summon the courage" to support what could be the last major legislative achievement of his presidency. "The status quo is unacceptable," he said.

Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss., who has faced critical ads back home over his support for the bill, said Sunday, "I'm not committed to voting for the final product — the wheels may come off. But I am committed to trying."

Democrats have taken hits from their normal allies, including labor and some Hispanic groups.

"We know what they're against. What are they for?" asked Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. "We have a terrible problem in this country that demands an answer."

But Sen. Jeff Sessions, R-Ala., a leading critic of the legislation, argued that support for the bill continues to plummet, both among senators thought to be behind it and among the public.

"We are going to use every effort to slow this process down and continue to hold up the bill," he said.

How about making a difference in a child's life?

Become a Court Appointed Special Advocate for a child in District of Columbia.

We are recruiting for the next training class of volunteers to become advocates for abused and neglected children. In particular, we are recruiting volunteers for our Transition Initiative in which advocates will be paired with youth who are aging out of the foster care system to assist them in preparing for independence. After just 30 hours of training, you will be sworn in as an Officer of the Court, assigned a child and given legal authority to conduct research regarding his or her best interests. Afterwards, the court reports and recommendations that you submit will have a lifelong impact on the future of a child in the District of Columbia.

Training will begin Saturday, July 14th. Please contact Naeemah Carter by phone: 202.887.0007 or email: ncarter@casadc.org for more information or visit us at www.casadc.org to download an application.

A bear attacked a group of U.S. tourists on a remote trail in the Carpathian Mountains, killing a woman and injuring two other people, authorities said Sunday. The group of six tourists chased off the bear when it tried to approach them near a cabin, but the bear reappeared on a trail and attacked the group late Saturday. The bear mauled to death a 31-year-old woman, despite attempts to distract it by throwing stones. Romania is home to about half of Europe's brown bear population, but attacks on humans are rare. Lebanon Blast Kills 6 U.N. Troops

Car bomb believed to be source of attack on international force

BEIRUT, LEBANON | A car bomb killed six U.N. peacekeepers on patrol in southern Lebanon Sunday in the first attack on the international force since it was expanded after last summer's war between Israel and Hezbollah guerrillas.

In the north, 10 people died in the latest battle between Lebanese troops and Sunni militants, who have threatened to start launching attacks in other parts of Lebanon.

Among those condemning the attack on the peacekeepers was the Shiite Hezbollah, which called it a "suspicious act that harms the people of the south and of Lebanon." The militant group has had good relations with the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon, known as UNIFIL, since the troops were first deployed in 1978.

The U.N. has since become increasingly involved in highly divisive issues in Lebanon, including its tense relations with Syria.

UNIFIL said in a statement that the six peacekeepers were killed and two others seriously wounded in an "apparent car bomb attack" while they were on patrol.

In Madrid, Spanish Defense Minister Jose Antonio Alonso said three Colombian and two Spanish peacekeepers were among the slain. He called it a "premeditated attack" and said the "most likely cause" was a car bomb or device activated by remote control. (AP)

Zimbabwe Rejects Crisis Forecasts

HARARE, ZIMBABWE | The government dismissed reports that the economic crisis will force President Robert Mugabe out of office by the end of the year, saying the country was politically and economically "stronger than ever," the official media reported Sunday.

Information Minister Sikh-anyiso Ndlovu slammed as "malicious propaganda" forecasts by U.S. ambassador Christopher Dell that inflation could reach an unprecedented 1.5 million percent within six months, triggering the government's collapse.

In media interviews, Dell predicted Mugabe's fall unless a dramatic policy shift was made to halt rampant inflation.

Ndlovu blamed Western economic measures against Zimbabwe for the nation's hardships and official inflation of 4,500 percent, the highest in the world, and insisted the government would "not be overthrown as it enjoyed the support of the people," the state Sunday Mail newspaper reported. (AP)

General: Iraqi Force Still Weak

U.S. commanders fear Iraqis may not be able to secure recent gains

BAQOUBA, IRAQ | The U.S. commander of a new offensive north of Baghdad, reclaiming insurgent territory day by day, said Sunday his Iraqi partners may be too weak to hold onto the gains.

The Iraqi military does not even have enough ammunition, said Brig. Gen. Mick Bednarek: "They're not quite up to the job yet."

His counterpart south of Baghdad seemed to agree, saying U.S. troops are too few to garrison the districts newly rid of insurgents. "It can't be coalition [U.S.] forces. We have what we have. There's got to be more Iraqi security forces," said Maj. Gen. Rick Lynch.

The two commanders spoke after a deadly day for the U.S. military in Iraq. At least 12 soldiers were killed on Saturday from roadside bombings and other causes, leaving at least 31 dead for the week.

Bednarek predicted it would be weeks before Iraqi police and soldiers could keep al-Qaeda out of western Baqouba and months before they were able to do the same on the city's east side and outlying villages. LAUREN FRAYER (AP)

Palestinians show their ID to Israeli soldiers at a checkpoint near Nablus in the West Bank. A summit of Israeli and Arab leaders will be held on Monday in Egypt.

Leaders Gather To Support Abbas

Israel agrees to release funds to Palestinians before Egypt summit

JERUSALEM | Israeli and Arab leaders will gather Monday in a high-profile bid to prop up embattled Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas after he lost the Gaza Strip to Hamas, but Israel sought to play down expectations for the meeting.

Israel made a significant goodwill gesture Sunday ahead of the summit, agreeing to release desperately needed funds it has withheld from the Palestinian government. But Israel cautioned there would be no "dramatic breakthroughs," rejecting Palestinian calls to start talks on a peace treaty.

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak invited Abbas, Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Olmert and Jordan's King Abdullah II to the Red Sea resort of Sharm el-Sheik for a high-profile show of support for the Palestinian president.

On the eve of the summit, the Israeli air force carried out its first airstrike in Gaza since Hamas took over, hitting a car, killing one person and wounding three. Islamic Jihad said the car was carrying members on a "holy mission," code for an attack on Israel.

On Sunday, Olmert's Cabinet approved the release of tax funds that Israel collects on behalf of the Palestinians but has withheld since Hamas swept Palestinian parliamentary elections in January 2006. Israel is holding $550 million in frozen funds, but the Cabinet decision did not say how much of the money would be released or when.

Hamas, predictably, scorned the upcoming summit, saying it would not succeed in weakening the Islamic group.

"They should learn from the experience of the past year and a half, which proved that all bids to bring down Hamas are ineffective," Hamas spokesman Sami Abu Zuhri said.

The regional summit comes a day ahead of a gathering in Jerusalem of the Quartet of Mideast negotiators — the U.S., EU, U.N. and Russia.

The hope is that the meeting in Egypt could lead to more in-depth international efforts to prod Mideast peace talks that broke down amid violence in 2001. AMY TEIBEL (AP)

Brown Takes Over as Labour Chief

U.K. party leader vows to learn from Iraq war as he heads for PM job

MANCHESTER, ENGLAND | Britain's next prime minister, Gordon Brown, pledged on Sunday to learn lessons from the Iraq war as he took over leadership of the Labour Party from Tony Blair.

The Treasury chief, who will succeed Blair on Wednesday, promised sweeping domestic reforms and a new focus on international policy, saying he recognized global extremism would not be defeated by military force alone.

Future foreign policy "will reflect the truth that to isolate and defeat terrorist extremism now involves more than military force," Brown told a specially convened conference of party members in Manchester, northern England, where he made his maiden speech as leader.

Brown acknowledged that mistakes had been made in the handling of the war and its aftermath, and promised that lessons have been learned for the future. The unpopularity of the Iraq war, and Britain's role in it, have dogged Blair through the last years of his leadership.

Iraq had "been a divisive issue for our party and our country," Brown said, adding that he would strive to work for a Mideast peace settlement that "becomes daily more urgent."

Justice Minister Harriet Harman — who has called for the government to apologize for mistakes in the Iraq war — won a vote among party and labor union members and was named Brown's deputy. (AP)

Cuba's Castro Aims to Motivate Country's Youth

HAVANA | Fidel Castro reached out to Cuba's youth on Sunday, writing that "If the young people fail, everything will fail" in a public acknowledgement of the Communist Party's struggle to motivate a new generation.

Writing to Cuba's Communist Youth Union, the 80-year-old Castro said the principles that fueled the guerrilla uprising that toppled Fulgencio Batista continue to inspire people all over the world.

Most Cubans, unlike Castro and his gray-haired contemporaries, have little direct connection to the 1959 revolution. Many Cuban youth — like young people everywhere — are more interested in things like Internet access than in upholding revolutionary ideals. (AP)

Citronella Candle Causes Two-Alarm House Fire

Fire investigators believe a citronella candle left unattended was responsible for a massive fire at a Fairfax County home. The fire started at about 3:30 p.m. Saturday in the North Hill subdivision. Fire officials say the two-alarm fire caused about $825,000 dollars in damage. A family of nine people, two adults and seven children, has been displaced. Fairfax Fire and Rescue spokesman Raul Castillo says the fast-moving fire likely started on the rear deck. (AP)

New Road Laws Coming to Virginia

Regulations targeting 'abusive' motorists to take effect on July 1

RICHMOND, VA. | Memo to Lead Foot: Ease off the gas pedal starting Sunday or risk paying shocking new fees the state will use to help pay for major road projects.

Scores of new state laws take effect next month, but few will affect everyday life as much as those that deal with the state's roads, the way we drive on them and — bottom line — how we pay for them.

New laws that affect the motoring public will be the most widely and frequently felt, largely in higher fees, fines and taxes.

Statewide, the transportation funding law passed this year generates about $525 million annually and authorizes up to $3 billion in long-term borrowing.

"Abusive" in-state motorists will pay hundreds of dollars — in some cases, thousands — over three years in addition to existing fines and court costs and possible jail time. Drive with a suspended or revoked license and pony up three annual payments of $250 each; reckless driving, three yearly payments of

RULES FOR THE ROAD

More rules that affect everyday drivers starting July 1:

- New licensees 17 and younger will be ticketed for talking on the cell phone while driving.
- Smoking within 20 feet of a gasoline pump becomes a misdemeanor with a fine up to $500.
- The age for kids required to ride in child-restraint devices increases from 5 years old to 8. Infants up to a year old have to be secured in rear-facing child restraints in a backseat.

$350 each; driving under the influence, $750 a year for three years.

The first annual payment goes to the court upon conviction; DMV collects the final two as prerequisites to vehicle registration renewals. "We could charge everybody an extra 100 bucks a year or we could charge abusive drivers, the people who abuse the roads.

People with good driving records don't have to pay," said Del. David Albo, Fairfax County. Additional fees, fines and taxes are expected within the year for Northern Virginia to finance new road projects. (AP)

New Mixing Bowl Patterns Irk Drivers

After eight years and $676 million, all of the swirling ramps and bridges are open at the Springfield interchange, and traffic is flowing freely through one of the busiest crossroads on the East Coast, where Interstates 95 and 395 hit the Capital Beltway.

But there is growing concern that navigating the new Mixing Bowl's 50 ramps and 24 lanes is confusing and could be creating entirely different safety problems. Drivers complain of counterintuitive highway splits where they must head to the left to ultimately go right and head to the right to go left.

"It's doing the opposite of what people expect," said John Ulaszek of Arlington County, who commutes daily through the interchange and reports plenty of close calls. He sometimes takes his camera to record the skid marks on the pavement and the last-minute lane changes.

"It's like putting the hot and cold knobs on the opposite side of the sink, and people can't understand why they just got scalded," he said.

Virginia Department of Transportation officials say that the new interchange is a vast safety improvement over the old configuration and that traffic will be smoother as soon as drivers get used to it. Traffic engineers will continue to tweak the design and study better signage to smooth traffic flow before the project officially is finished next month.

Candid Camera

New device casts a watchful eye over online test-taking

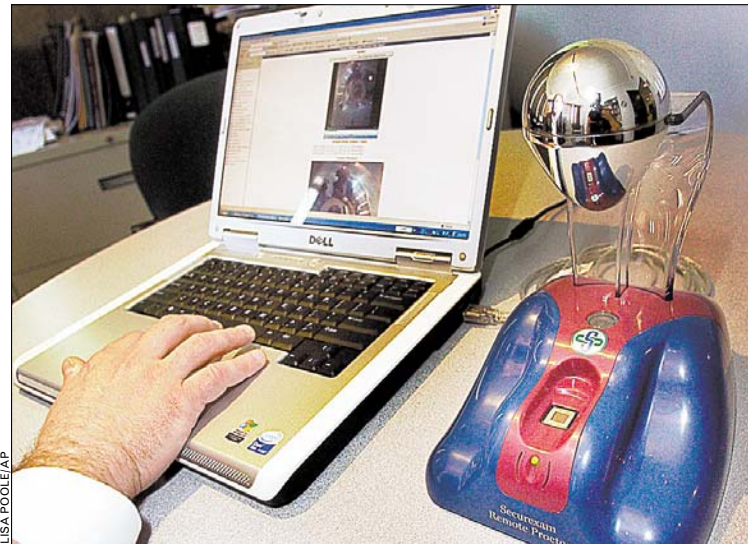

EDUCATION | The number of college students taking courses online is surging, creating a tough dilemma for educators who want to prevent cheating.

Do you trust students to take an exam on their own computer at home or work, even though it may be easy to sneak a peek at the textbook? Or do you force them to trek to a proctored test center, detracting from the convenience that drew them to online classes in the first place?

The dilemma is one reason many online programs do little testing at all. But some new technology that places a camera inside students' homes may be the way of the future — as long as students don't find it too creepy.

This fall, Troy University in Alabama will begin rolling out the new technology for many of its close to 11,000 online students, about a third of whom are at U.S. military installations around the world.

The device, made by Cambridge, Mass.-based Software Secure, is similar to other test-taking software. It locks down a computer while the test is being taken, preventing students from searching files or the Internet. The latest version also includes fingerprint authentication.

PRIVATE EYE: A new device puts a camera inside students' homes, solving the problem in online education of how to make sure students aren't cheating on exams.

But the new development is a small Web cam and microphone that is set up where a student takes the exam. The camera points into a reflective ball, which allows it to capture a full 360-degree image.

When the exam begins, the device records audio and video. Software detects significant noises and motions and flags them in the recording. An instructor can go back and watch only the portions flagged by the software to see what was going on — a student making a phone call, leaving the room — and whether there is a sudden surge in performance afterward.

The inventors admit it's far from a perfect defense against a determined cheater. But a human test proctor isn't necessarily better. And the camera at least "ensures that those people that are taking classes at a distance are on a level playing field," said Douglas Winneg, Software Secure's president and CEO.

For Sandra Kinney, a state employee from Stockbridge, Ga., pursuing a master's in public administration and one of the students on Troy's trial run, having a camera in her home was no big deal. It was worth it not to have to drive to an exam center.

"For me, in Atlanta, it outweighs sitting in two or three hours of traffic," she said. JUSTIN POPE (AP)

Google's Fair Trade

REGULATION | Once relatively indifferent to government affairs, Google Inc. is seeking help inside the Beltway to fight the rise of Web censorship worldwide.

The online search giant is taking a novel approach to the problem by asking U.S. trade officials to treat Internet restrictions as international trade barriers, similar to other hurdles such as tariffs.

Google sees the dramatic increase in government Internet censorship, particularly in Asia and the Middle East, as a potential threat to its advertising-driven business model and wants government officials to consider the issue in economic, not just political, terms.

"It's fair to say that censorship is the No. 1 barrier to trade that we face," said Andrew McLaughlin, Google's director of public policy and government affairs. A

Google spokesman said Monday that McLaughlin has met with officials from the U.S. trade representative's office several times this year to discuss the issue.

"If censorship regimes create barriers to trade in violation of international trade rules, the USTR would get involved," USTR spokeswoman Gretchen Hamel said.

Censorship online has risen dramatically the past five years, belying the hype of the late 1990s, which portrayed the Internet as largely impervious to government interference. (AP)

"I'll keep to myself what I think we actually will win. But it's more than 10 games." — Detroit Lions QB Jon Kitna, revising his March prediction that the Lions would win 10 games. Detroit hasn't had a winning season since 2000 and hasn't won 10 games since 1995.

Thomas hits his 499th career HR in a near no-no for McGowan

BASEBALL | Dustin McGowan was looking for a no-hitter and a milestone for Frank Thomas, all in the same game.

McGowan's bid for the second no-hitter in Blue Jays history ended when Jeff Baker singled leading off the ninth inning, and Toronto beat the Colorado Rockies 5-0 Sunday to complete a three-game sweep.

Frank Thomas hit his 499th career homer and Vernon Wells added a three-run drive for the Blue Jays (37-37), who got back to .500 for the first time since they were 13-13 on May 1.

"That would have been priceless, 500 and a no-no," McGowan said.

U.S. Rallies to Win 4th Gold Cup Title

Team continues its dominance of Mexico with 2-1 victory in final

SOCCER | Change the venue, change the coaches, change the players. The only thing that doesn't change when Mexico and the United States play is the result.

Landon Donovan scored his 34th career goal, tying Eric Wynalda atop the career list, and Benny Feilhaber connected on a gorgeous volley as the United States rallied for a 2-1 victory over Mexico on Sunday in the final of the CONCACAF Gold Cup, the championship of North and Central America and the Caribbean.

The victory extended the Americans' dominance over their neighbors to the south and gave them a berth in the 2009 Confederations Cup in South Africa, an important tune-up ahead of the 2010 World Cup. The United States is 9-2-1 against Mexico since 2000.

The teams failed to shake hands after the final whistle, another recent "tradition" in this rivalry. Instead, the Americans ran over to Sam's Army — really more of a platoon — to salute the small contingent of U.S. fans in the sellout crowd of 60,000. Donovan tossed his shirt into the stands, then grabbed a U.S. flag that a fan tossed and wrapped it around his shoulders.

This is the fourth Gold Cup title for the Americans, tying them with Mexico. It also kept new coach Bob Bradley's perfect record intact at 10-0-1. NANCY ARMOUR (AP)

Briton Wants Mayweather

After knocking out Castillo, Hatton sets sights on the champ

BOXING | It took Ricky Hatton three fights in the United States to finally make the smashing debut he wanted. All he can do now is hope both American fans and Floyd Mayweather Jr. were paying attention.

Hatton's knockout win over Jose Luis Castillo on Saturday just might have been the breakthrough the British fighter needed to convince fans outside his country that he is the real thing at light welterweight.

His countrymen needed no such convincing. They came by the thousands, singing and cheering their hero on as Hatton won his biggest fight since stopping Kostya Tszyu two years ago in England.

"Hopefully, we'll go on to bigger and better fights," Hatton said.

"I just can't wait to be involved in some fantastic matches."

The most fantastic of those would be against Mayweather, of course, who is widely considered the best pound-for-pound fighter in the game. Mayweather fought last at welterweight, beating Oscar De La Hoya, but there would be little problem finding a weight at which the two boxers could meet.

Like Mayweather, Hatton is undefeated. Unlike Mayweather, he fights in a wild, all-out style that should prove popular as he continues his campaign in the United States.

"There's a lot of big fights out there," he said. "But, ultimately, my goal is Floyd Mayweather Jr. He's regarded as the best pound-for-pound fighter, so who wouldn't want to fight him?" TIM DAHLBERG (AP)

PARTY LINES: Though the Democrats took control of Congress last November, it will likely take a miracle for them to win the 46th annual Roll Call Congressional Baseball Game on Monday. The Republicans have won nine of the last 10 games — with an average margin of seven runs per game. The game is at 7:30 p.m. at RFK, and tickets are $8. (EXPRESS)

CHIP ON HIS SHOULDER: Braves third baseman Chipper Jones says he felt pressured by pitcher John Smoltz to return from a groin injury last weekend. "You can't worry about who's in the lineup and who isn't," Smoltz said Friday. "I certainly appreciate the effort of the guys who are on the field busting it."

Small Field of Wimbledon Favorites

Serena is one of just a handful of women with a chance to win

TENNIS | Not one to doubt herself, or pay any heed to those who do, Serena Williams likes her chances as she returns to the All England Club for Wimbledon, which starts Monday.

"Like I always say, when I'm playing well, it's hard for anyone to beat me. It's just a fact. I think a lot of people understand that," said Williams, who won Wimbledon in 2002 and 2003 but missed last year's tournament with a knee injury.

Unlike most players, neither she nor her older sister Venus enters any warmup events on grass, meaning

Monday's match will be Serena's first since losing in the French Open quarterfinals to the eventual champion, No. 1 Justine Henin.

They could meet at the same stage at Wimbledon and join three-time champion Venus Williams, defending champion Amelie Mauresmo, 2004 champion Maria Sharapova, and rising Serb stars Ana Ivanovic and Jelena Jankovic as candidates for strong showings.

"We are probably, I don't know, four or five [who are] able to get the trophy this year," Mauresmo said. "Yeah, I do consider myself part of these four or five."

removed, then hampered by injuries, Mauresmo has won only one title since Wimbledon.

"It was disappointing," she said. "But I'm definitely looking forward to [finding] some confidence, some rhythm again."

Serena Williams, another former No. 1, fell even further in the rankings, all the way out of the top 100, when she missed large chunks of time because of assorted injuries. But in Australia, she showed what she still is capable of doing by claiming her eighth major title, most among active women.

"I believe I'm definitely the best player if I'm playing well. It's hard for anyone to beat me," she said. "It's not even a belief. It's more of a fact."

Team New Zealand and Alinghi fly through the water off the coast of Spain.

Cup Tied After Kiwis Win Race

With the victory, New Zealand team ends Alinghi streak at six

SAILING | For once, the America's Cup is looking like a real contest.

A surprise come-from-behind win by Emirates Team New Zealand over seemingly unbeatable Swiss defender Alinghi on Sunday evened the score to 1-1 in the best-of-nine series. It also ended a string of one-sided blowouts.

It is the first time since 1992 that the America's Cup will not be a sweep. New Zealand's win also snapped Alinghi's six-race winning streak, dating back to its 5-0 victory over the Kiwis in 2003.

"It's been a long time coming to turn the tables," said New Zealand's strategist Ray Davies. "It's been huge for the team to get a win on the board."

New Zealand skipper Dean Barker finally got the better of former teammate Brad Butterworth, the skipper aboard Alinghi, and also ended Butterworth's record of 16 straight cup wins.

"When we came back together again ... we just didn't put the boat in the right place," Butterworth said. "We should have tacked closer." (AP)

TOP OF THEIR CLASSES

It's likely that either Greg Oden or Kevin Durant will join the ranks of these former No. 1 picks:

- 2006: Andrea Bagnani
- 2005: Andrew Bogut
- 2004: Dwight Howard
- 2003: LeBron James
- 2002: Yao Ming
- 2001: Kwame Brown
- 2000: Kenyon Martin
- 1999: Elton Brand
- 1998: Michael Olowokandi
- 1997: Tim Duncan
- 1996: Allen Iverson

organization to make the best choice, not the immediate choice."

These teenagers who turned pro after one year in college are viewed as future stars who can make an immediate impact on a franchise.

Portland's good fortune of landing the No. 1 pick in a year when the top of the draft is so strong has turned fans giddy after several down years led many to lose enthusiasm. An unscientific poll on the Blazers.com site showed Oden with 75 percent of the vote as of Sunday.

"You never know. Kevin's working out; he's working hard, too. Everybody else is working hard," Oden said. "You never know — they might throw a curveball and draft somebody from Germany."

Fans Sound Off on NBA's No. 1 Debate

Portland embraces the challenge of choosing between two top picks

NBA | E-mails arrive for Portland Trail Blazers general manager Kevin Pritchard reading simply "honk" or "honk, honk."

They come from fans weighing in on whom the Trail Blazers should take with the first pick of this week's NBA draft. Franchise officials have embraced the alluring but agonizing choice, putting up billboards around the city that ask drivers to beep their horns once for Ohio State center Greg Oden and twice for Texas forward Kevin Durant.

The Blazers did not indicate which way they were leaning heading into Thursday's draft in New York. "There is no consensus" among the team's brass, Pritchard said.

"We're not ready to make a choice right now," he said. "We owe it to this

LOUDMOUTH: Rhonda Byrne's book and DVD, "The Secret," outline a questionable strategy for success and even survival.

Worst-Kept 'Secret'

A best-selling book and DVD draw praise, but also criticism

BOOK | Want to know a secret? Thoughts of fear and powerlessness among the people who died in Hurricane Katrina and the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks attracted them "to being in the wrong place at the wrong time."

That's probably the most eye-popping claim associated with "The Secret," a book that tells us that the "law of attraction" — basically "like attracts like" — governs our universe.

"If people believe they can be in the wrong place at the wrong time, and they have no control over outside circumstances," the book says, "those thoughts of fear, separation and powerlessness, if persistent, can attract them to being in the wrong place at the wrong time."

"The Secret," is the work of Rhonda Byrne, an Australian television and film producer. The book, which advocates the power of positive thinking, has more than 5.2 million copies in print. A 90-minute DVD of the same name has sold 2 million copies.

A pop culture phenomenon, it's also attracted critics who are bothered by what they see as a philosophy that could dissolve into a blame-the-victim mentality and suggest it could be dangerous to those suffering from serious illness who don't get any medical treatment.

Others find the movement embarrassingly materialistic or the latest example of an American propensity of wanting something for nothing.

Most of the book and DVD focus on how people can improve their lives, health, relationships and financial situations. But it also says people can draw negative happenings toward them.

During "events in history where masses of lives were lost," the book says, the "frequency of their thoughts matched the frequency of the event."

The positive spin the book places on that assertion is that believers will no longer be worried of being victims of the "luck of the draw." Instead, "whatever you choose to think will become your life experience."

That whole concept is one of the most troubling assertions of "The Secret," according to John Norcross, a psychologist and professor at the University of Scranton in Pennsylvania.

"So that would mean that if you're poor, you have somehow earned it by your thinking," Norcross said. The book's mantra of "ask, believe, receive," he said, easily transforms into a blame-the-victim mentality.

"Cancer victims. Sexual assault victims. Holocaust victims. They're responsible?" Norcross said. "The book is riddled with these destructive falsehoods." TARA BURGHART (AP)

Fragile Album From the Spree

Tim DeLaughter and the Polyphonic Spree find power in numbers

MUSIC | Three albums in, and reviews of the Polyphonic Spree still focus first on the group as a concept. Which is understandable; there aren't too many cult-like, 20-odd-piece choral ensembles active in pop music. But the extra-musical attention is also beneficial to founder Tim DeLaughter, whose tunes still haven't caught up with his ambition.

"The Fragile Army" remains, like the Spree's previous work, heavily orchestrated, but this time the debt to lush '60s pop such as the Fifth Dimension is more subtle. The rhythm section frequently pushes to the fore, and the homage on several tunes seems to evoke the more baroque practitioners of glam.

However, these relatively simple power-pop songs aren't always big or memorable enough to support their grand conceits (as well as the cryptic, feel-good lyrics). The Spree needs the sort of soaring melodies written by a Jason MacIsaac (Heavy Blinkers) or a Neal Morse (ex-Spock's Beard) to make DeLaughter's grandiose vision fly. Until then, they'll have the same recruitment challenges as the real one. DAN LEROY

Higher Solo Velocity

Sarah Shannon finds her own sound and songwriting skills

MUSIC | People change in the course of a decade. Since musicians not named Jimmy Page are not gods, and thus not exceptions to this rule, their songwriting and music styles also change.

Former Velocity Girl frontwoman Sarah Shannon is no exception.

Since the D.C. indie-pop group disbanded in 1996, the Seattle-based Shannon has played in a couple of short-lived bands and released two solo albums: 2002's self-titled album and the new "City Morning Song." The CD, she said, "was written at a very happy point in my life. I met my husband, got married, had a little girl, bought a house — it's not very glamorous or very rock 'n' roll," she laughed.

But these life changes — a departure from the freewheeling days of Velocity Girl, and even from her previous album written five years earlier — are evident on "City Morning Song." It's a collection of "tried-and-true, man-and-woman love songs," Shannon said. "People seem surprised by the U-turn I took in music, but it's just a different kind of pop music. I had never written a song on my own [in Velocity Girl], and I had no idea what was going to come out. It turns out I have a little Burt Bacharach on one shoulder and Carole King on the other, whispering in my ear."

One exception to the love-song collection is "On and On," which Shannon said was inspired partly by 9/11. On the surface, it's a "jaunty walk through the city in the morning, but I wrote it about walking through Manhattan after Sept. 11. There's this feeling of a city reawakened."

"City Morning Song" marks a step in independence for Shannon, as this is the first CD for which she wrote or co-wrote all the songs. "On my first album, I co-wrote some, but [producer] Blake [Wescott] wrote two songs outright. I like to think my songwriting is getting better, though I'm really not the one to say."

"I've always loved being in Velocity Girl, but the music I'm making now is a little more true to myself."

Entertainment

ALMIGHTY FLOP: Steve Carell's critically slammed "Evan Almighty" took box office gold over the weekend even with a sad $32.1 million. More surprising was second-place finisher "1408," a Stephen King adaptation starring John Cusack.

A DECADE LATER: "Lara Croft Tomb Raider: Anniversary," right, is a huge departure from the original, left, now 10 years old.

Lara's Makeover

Fans of Lara Croft will agree — she just gets better with age

VIDEO GAME | Scantly clad dungeon-crawler Lara Croft has been reborn many times over the years as a line of video-game sequels and mediocre (OK, terrible) film remakes.

Now this digital heroine is reprising her role from the original game with a remake of sorts called "Lara Croft Tomb Raider: Anniversary."

A lot has changed in the decade since the groundbreaking original.

Gone are the barely distinguishable blocky graphics and the unforgiving controls that would often spell instant death.

Developer Crystal Dynamics has instead created a T-rated, $29.99 remake that feels new and not some quick way to cash in on the franchise once again.

Everything in "Anniversary" — the precise, dynamic controls, the impressive, though not quite next-gen visuals, and the expansive, puzzling levels — speaks of a game that's received a proper, careful overhaul for the PC and PlayStation 2.

The game's devoted fan following will love it.

The game's story remains essentially unchanged, and you'll spend most of your time bounding from one obstacle to another.

It's cool reliving all those exciting moments from the original, culminating with a showdown with a towering T-rex. The puzzles are far more interactive and complex than they were in the first game. And Lara's far easier to move around than ever before, thanks to a revamped control scheme that is far more precise.

It's almost unfair to compare the two.

Video-game technology has changed immeasurably since 1997, and that's painfully clear if you happen to have a copy of the original "Tomb Raider."

One thing you don't get with "Anniversary" is a copy of the original. And this new version doesn't really take Lara in any new directions.

Lara might be forever preserved as a youthful heroine, but her gameplay has aged, and improved, considerably. MATT SLAGLE (AP)

Pumpkins Thrive in Ashville

REUNION | When the Smashing Pumpkins, led by frontman Billy Corgan, reunited after seven years to plan a U.S. concert series, they made a surprising choice for their first shows: a small club in the mountains of North Carolina.

Corgan

The Orange Peel, which has a capacity of 942 people, will host the alternative rock band when it opens Saturday for a nine-show run in Asheville.

"It's a legendary band in a small setting," said Cory Gates, 33, of Asheville, a longtime fan who saw the Smashing Pumpkins play in New England in the mid-1990s. "I don't know if you can get much better. It puts us up there with the big boys." (AP)

Positive Message

'90210's' Jennie Garth returns to the small screen on Lifetime

TV MOVIE | Teenage sexuality, conformity and paranoia have been the ingredients of made-for-TV melodramas, movies and novels for decades. "Girl, Positive" (9 p.m., Lifetime) puts a new spin on the old "girl in trouble" genre and stars "90210" star Jennie Garth, to boot.

Garth plays Sarah Bennett, an HIV-positive substitute teacher who volunteers at an AIDS clinic run by Ariel (S. Epatha Merkersen). Sarah's not exactly running to tell everyone about her status, especially not the handsome vice principal, who can't hide his affections.

Sarah's job gives her a window on the highly charged sexual atmosphere of a high school still reeling from the death of Jason (Eric Von Detten), a recent grad and all-around football hero. We soon learn that Jason was not as squeaky clean as his reputation, a revelation that frightens the school's sexually active population. Before his car-accident death, he had been dabbling in heroin use and had contracted HIV.

The film captures the emotional confusion of high school. The movie's obvious message is that students' rash decisions can have life-changing implications. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Food

A battle is brewing in Italy over garlic's place in the kitchen

Look around the kitchen of Filippo La Mantia's hip restaurant in downtown Rome and you'll see oranges, fresh basil, olive oil. But no garlic.

"I will never use garlic," declares the Sicilian chef as he demonstrates how to make a flavorful pasta dish — octopus linguine with orange juice and almond pesto — without the ingredient he hates.

A quintessential element of traditional Italian and Mediterranean cooking, garlic is at the center of a gastronomic dispute in this nation that prides itself on its food. To critics it is just a stinky product that overwhelms more delicate flavors. Admirers say garlic enhances taste, gives a dish an extra punch — and is also good for the health.

"Garlic is the king of the kitchen," says Antonello Colonna, another prominent Italian chef. "To eliminate it is like eliminating violins from an orchestra."

Critics have started a ferocious campaign for garlic-free dining, and the debate has moved out of culinary circles. Corriere della Sera, Italy's top daily, devoted a page to the matter this week, listing celebrities in each camp under the headline: "The Crusade of Garlic Enemies."

They have a high-profile campaigner in former Premier Silvio Berlusconi, whose aversion to garlic and obsession with minty breath are legendary. During his five-year stint, Palazzo Chigi, the premier's palace, was rigorously garlic-free.

"He considers garlic very dangerous for the environment, his personal environment," said Carlo Rossella, who heads the news department for one of Berlusconi's Mediaset channels. "Berlusconi doesn't like bad smells. Garlic is considered by Berlusconi a bad smell."

Rossella, who says he is allergic to garlic, has been compiling a list of garlic-free restaurants and hopes to persuade "distinguished" restaurants to come up with separate garlic-free menus.

"Garlic, for me, is a sort of persecution," he laments. "They put garlic in almost any dish: With meat, with fish, everywhere. It's not politically correct to impose garlic on everybody."

Food critic Davide Paolini counters that certain dishes — such as the aglio, olio e peperoncino (or garlic, oil and hot peppers) pasta — simply cannot be cooked without it.

"It's nonsense dictated by people who want to keep their breath under control," he said. "But it's a real, genuine smell. It's not stink."

The bulbous herb has long been a mainstay of Italian cuisine, from steaks in Tuscany to dishes of the poor south, where cooking is traditionally less rich in butter and cream and garlic's pungent flavor often accompanies simple vegetable dishes.

Garlic's therapeutic qualities also have been proclaimed, including for heart disease, cancer and infections,

but there's no agreement in the scientific community.

Fearing the no-garlic campaign might hurt producers, farmers associations have weighed in. One leading farming group, Coldiretti, put out a statement lamenting the "controversy over the use of garlic" and maintaining it contributes to Italians' longevity.

La Mantia's customers love his garlic-free dishes — his trattoria has been a success story in Rome since it opened four years ago.

"You can cook perfectly well without it," he said. "I use a lot of different ingredients — mint, basil, capers, orange, lemons — to make up for it."

Moments after scooping his pasta from the pan and sprinkling it with thin almond slices, he says: "And that is how we do it."

A Military Education

Travel

D-Day's new visitor's center puts the WWII battle in perspective

Photos of fresh-faced privates, wizened U.S. generals and the largest amphibious military operation in history. Dented army canteens that once dotted killing fields in France. The booming sounds of gunships echoing over the waves in Normandy — this time, on video.

The Normandy American Cemetery in Colleville-sur-Mer, best known for its sober rows of white grave markers honoring fallen U.S. troops in World War II, has at last gotten a visitor's center.

Nearly a million visitors trek every year to the cemetery overlooking Omaha Beach, one of the two landing points where U.S. troops stormed ashore on D-Day — June 6, 1944 — and helped the Allies rid the menace of Nazi Germany over Europe.

“The cemetery has this powerful emotional component. What was lacking was a story to go with the names.”

MACARENA ARISTEGUI

Six years in the making, the new center was inaugurated recently by U.S. Defense Secretary Robert Gates for the 63rd anniversary of the start of “Operation Overlord” that helped end the war.

“We build memorials like this to remind us of the past, so that successive generations will know the enormous cost of freedom,” Gates said.

Designers faced a delicate task: Provide an educational experience to the public without overshadowing the sacrifices of nearly 10,000 Americans buried nearby.

The $30 million visitor's center is purposely understated, with most of the 10,000 square feet of display space underground.

“The cemetery has always had this extremely powerful emotional component,” said Macarena

Aristegui of the American Battle Monuments Commission, which runs the cemetery and memorial. “What was lacking was a story to go with the names written on the headstones.”

The site is one of the most visited U.S. military cemeteries in the world. It draws veterans' relatives, many of them Americans who feel proud of their country's contribution to the liberation of France and Europe, as well as veterans themselves whose numbers are dwindling — but who still have many thoughts for their fallen comrades-in-arms.

The center displays scratched and dented weapons, photos of soldiers who carried them, and excerpts from letters they sent home. It also shows documentary films and news reports about the war's progress.

U.S. Congressmen David Obey, D-Wis., and John Murtha, D-Pa., proposed building the center in 2001, and it was designed by French-American architect Nicolas Kelemen. The first stone was laid two years ago.

About 200 American World War II veterans were on hand for the center's June 6, 2007, inauguration, along with 15 who had fought on the beaches, some of whom hadn't been back since the war, Aristegui said.

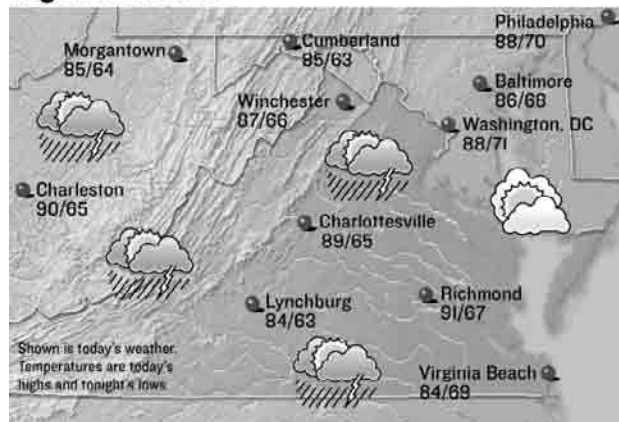

Admission to the visitor center is free, and a small room is available for veterans and their families to give them privacy before or after a visit to the cemetery.

What a Girl Wants

Disney's new clothing lines take aim at the tween market

Disney Channel's "Hannah Montana" is opening her closet to fans, launching a collection of clothes, accessories, home decor and even electric guitars as Disney goes after the increasingly powerful tween market.

Hannah's alter ego, Miley Cyrus — wearing a hot-pink sequined tank top, white jeans and a white leather jacket — offered a first glimpse of the Disney Consumer Products line in Manhattan on Tuesday.

The look mimicked Hannah's overall style, sweet and appropriate for school with flashes of sparkle. (The premise of the show is that Hannah is a country girl-turned-pop star who tries to keep her celebrity life a secret from her classmates.)

Among the offerings, modeled by wannabe Hannahs even younger than 14-year-old Miley: a denim jumper with rhinestones, slim-cut Bermuda shorts, cargo-pocket capris with swaths of silver, a sundress topped with a denim vest and a sheer peach-colored beaded bolero worn over a regular tank top.

A handful of the T-shirts were covered with Hannah's face, but otherwise logos and literal references to Hannah were kept to a minimum.

"It's not a costume. A tween girl isn't doing dress-up; they want to look like they could be Hannah Montana's friend," said Donna Sheridan, vice president and general manager of apparel, footwear and accessories for Disney Consumer Products. "This is a fashion line."

"Hannah Montana" will not be shouldering all the burden of growth — the sequel to the wildly popular original movie "High School Musical" premieres on the Disney Channel on Aug. 17, and a broad partnership with Wal-Mart is already in place.

Disney worked with Miley — daughter of Billy Ray Cyrus — and the "Hannah Montana" stylist to create the line.

Miley's influence is most seen in the broad array of colors in the collection and all the little jackets that have become an important part of the Hannah Montana wardrobe, Sheridan noted.

Disney and its family-oriented image have a role here, too. Because the tween market is largely made up of 9- to 14-year-old children who rely on their parents to pay for their clothes, purses and sequin-covered duvet covers, the Hannah Montana collection has to also appeal to Mom and Dad. It has to be fashionable and trendy but not cross the line to sexy.

"We have to strike a balance between what the girl wants and what the mother wants," Sheridan said. SAMANTHA CRITCHELL (AP)

Hey! Ho! Retro!

Interesting TWINKIE fact: Before WWII, the tasty cakes were actually filled with banana cream, but a shortage during the war made Hostess switch to the vanilla we all know and love. Now everything old is new again with Banana Creme Twinkies ($3.99, grocery stores). Express testers fell on the nuclear-yellow snacks with gusto, but reaction to the banana filling was mixed. Some called it "poor man's banana bread, but in a good way"; some said the filling tasted far too fake. And some decided that the Twinkies from their childhood just tasted better, somehow. Lisa de Moraes

Post TV columnist LISA DE MORAES was online Friday and talked about her favorite cast members on “Saturday Night Live” and what's going on at “Heroes” for the summer.

I thought “Heroes” was going to run straight through like a lot of the other serial dramas. I read today that Tim Kring, while talking about “Origins,” said that the show would still have a break in the middle of the season. Why do producers and networks choose to kill their best TV shows by doing this?

I can't explain it. They think they're going to fool the audience with these “Heroes: Origins” things in the middle during the break, in which we are introduced to new characters and we get to vote online as to which one we like best, and the winner will become a character on the grown-up actual series the following season. If there is a following season.

If you could assemble an all-star “Saturday Night Live” cast from past and present, the living and dead, who would it include?
All the dead ones. I'm morbid. What can I say?

I hate Dennis Leary (“Rescue Me”).

I can't understand for the life of me how he gets a TV show.

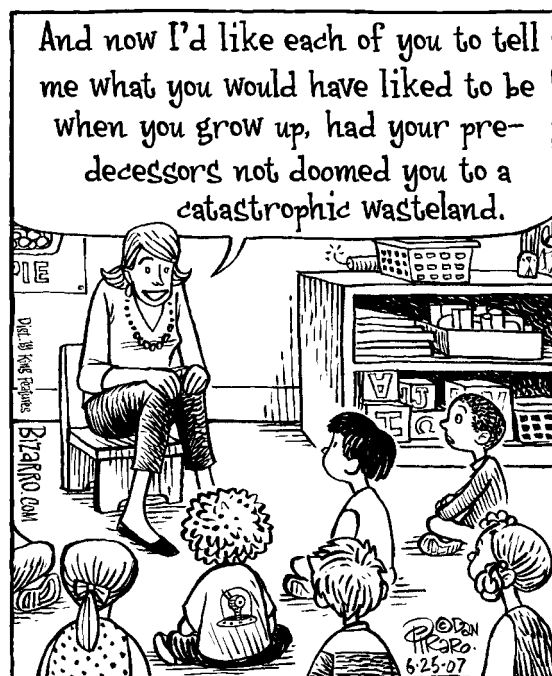

In some circles, he's considered “hot.” I'm assuming it's the same circle that thinks David Spade is one of America's sexiest bachelors, or whatever he was elected the other day by one of those celebrity suck-up mags.

Any truth to the rumor that Don Imus and Rosie are going to do a talk show on Fox? I would puke.
Oh, come on. Admit it. That would be craptastic!

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your attitude is on the mend at this time, and your work in all areas is likely to show vast improvement. A friend is ready to get over it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Prospects are looking good, but take care you're not simply overlooking certain negative trends. Take in all the facts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) That which begins before noon has a great deal of potential — even though it may begin slowly or without your knowledge.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Your ability to work well with others may well be affected by your unstable mood. See if you can't keep personal responses to a minimum.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You may be seeing things through a kind of individual distortion that is leading you to faulty assessments. Take another look.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) A loved one is after more than you're willing to give at this time, and you may have to prepare yourself for a change that can't easily be avoided.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone may think you've made a pact with the devil, but you can prove that everything you're doing is on the up-and-up.

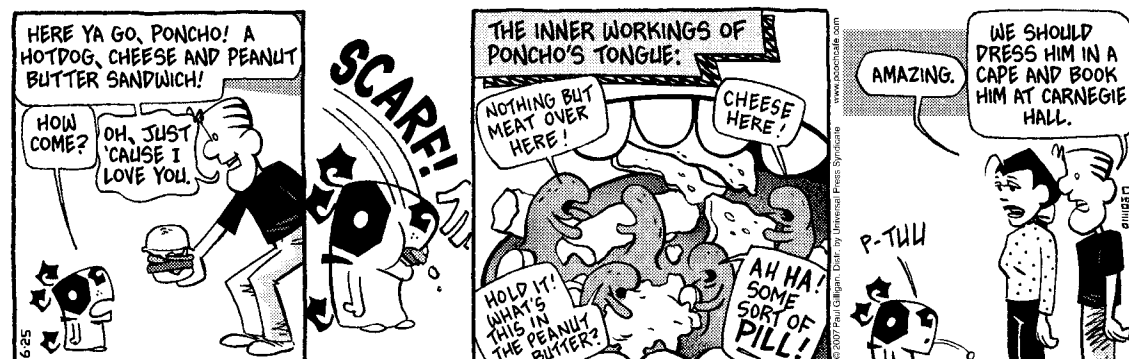

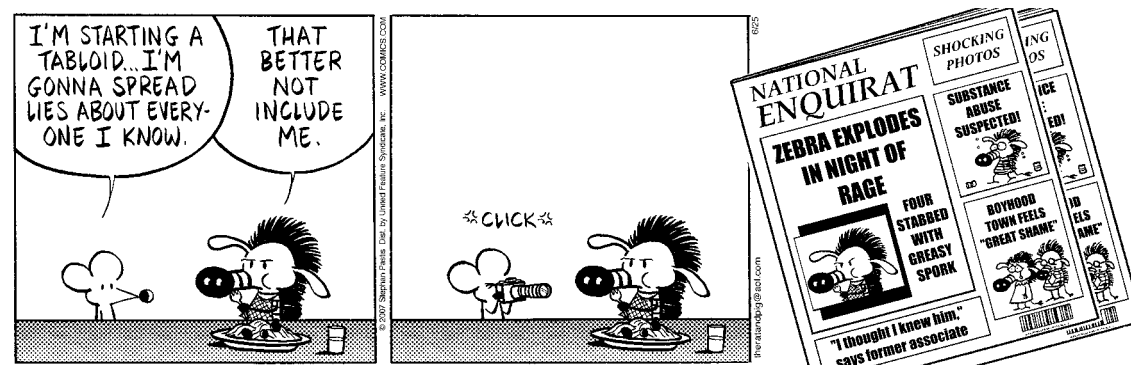

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Focus on putting things in the proper perspective. Don't let anyone tell you what you must or must not be thinking about things.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Quality control will prove important throughout the day. You don't want anything substandard to slip through the cracks.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Success of a current project depends upon your ability to network and to work well with those who are not directly involved in your own efforts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Proceed according to the playbook, but proceed with a little extra caution. Risks may be multiplied, and rewards threatened, by external forces.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This is a good day to seek advice regarding employment or certain relationship issues. You're actually ready to listen.

Habits Are Not Disorders

THE AMERICAN MEDICAL Association is seeking to add gaming addictions ("Doctors Debate Gaming Addictions," June 22) as yet another psychiatric disorder to the extensive list of illnesses in which the individual is not blameworthy. While it may be possible that some people can become addicted to gaming, that number is likely incredibly small, and the "addiction" is perhaps a symptom of a greater problem that may go unnoticed. This shift in classification from simply a habit to an addiction diminishes individual and personal responsibility. Will people ever be held accountable for their actions and not merely be allowed to blame them on their various "disorders"?

One Time You Probably Don't Want to Use Babel Fish

MICK JAGGER used the Catalan language to apologize to fans for last year's cancellation of several shows in four Spanish cities. Jagger told fans, "We are very sorry we canceled our concert last year, but now we are ready." Canal 3, the television station that broadcast the apology, described Jagger's Catalan diction as "better than average." (AP)

ISAIAH WASHINGTON, fired from "Grey's Anatomy" following the firestorm he started with a homophobic slur, hit back at the network Thursday. "They fired the wrong guy," he said in an interview with the Houston Chronicle. He blames former cast mate T.R. Knight for stoking the scandal. (AP)

REUNITED

On Again

PRINCE WILLIAM and his former girlfriend Kate Middleton have resumed their relationship, British newspapers reported Sunday. The young couple, who announced in April they had split, attended a party at an army barracks together earlier this month, newspapers claimed. William, 25, has also invited Middleton to attend a memorial concert to his late mother, Princess Diana, the Mail on Sunday reported. A spokeswoman for William's Clarence House office declined to comment. (AP)

Aw, Man. Now We Have to Think About, Like, the War

PARIS HILTON will be issued her get-out-of-jail card on Tuesday. The release date, announced Friday, was determined by the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department's Inmate Reception Center. The exact hour of Hilton's release was not disclosed. Although her sentence was for 45 days, authorities have said all along that with time off for good behavior and because of crowded jail conditions, Hilton was likely to serve only 23 days. (AP)

Ignorantly Offending People Now Hot Trend in Hollywood

CAMERON DIAZ appears to have committed a major fashion faux pas in Peru. The voice of Princess Fiona in the animated "Shrek" films may have inadvertently offended Peruvians, who suffered decades of violence from a Maoist guerrilla insurgency that killed nearly 70,000 people, by touring with a bag emblazoned with one of Mao Zedong's favorite political slogans. While explored the Inca city of Machu Picchu high in Peru's Andes, Diaz wore over her shoulder a trendy, olive green messenger bag emblazoned with a red star and the words "Serve the People" printed in Chinese on the flap, perhaps Chinese communist leader Mao's most famous political slogan.
